

First Fridays October 1, 2010 9am-12pm

Compliance in the Medical Practice

TWO WAYS TO ATTEND This program is available both live in Manchester and over the web via Webex. Because of the substantial course materials, the per person $65 fee is the same whether attending in Manchester or participating through Webex. Those interested in attending in person in Manchester, please register using the form below. Those persons interested in attending through Webex may register by emailing webinars@mainemed.com. Webex capacity is limited to 25 sites, so don't delay!

Objectives of this Seminar

This session is intended to assist physicians and their practice and compliance managers in understanding the issues surrounding the design and implementation of an effective compliance program. Given the increased level of scrutiny and enforcement at the federal and state level, this program offers a timely opportunity to discuss the range of issues affecting medical practice compliance efforts, from the general development of the overall plan to the specific issues that may arise in a coding and billing audit.

Faculty

John Gleason is a member of the Portland firm of Curtis Thaxter Stevens Broder & Micolleau, and chairs its Health Care Practice Group and its Employment Law Practice Group. His practice includes the representation of physicians and other health care providers in the organization and operation of their practices and the antitrust and regulatory issues arising from the affiliations between medical practices. His practice also includes counseling on a variety of employment matters ranging from compliance with federal and state laws on employment discrimination to regulatory issues arising from benefits administration.

Laurie Desjardins, CPC, PCS joined Baker Newman Noyes in 2006. She is a Senior Manager in the Healthcare Management Consulting Division specializing in revenue management including physician coding, provider based implementation, chargemaster analysis, fee schedule analysis, chart review, and coding and billing education. Laurie is the former director of the Coding Center, a joint venture of the Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont Medical Societies. She currently serves as Regional Governor of the American College of Medical Coding Specialists.
